What are the TExES exams? You made the decision to pursue a career in teaching and learn that something called TExES is necessary before you can be certified. Or maybe you have your teaching certificate and want to get your master teacher certified and find out that TExMaT is the key. What are TExES and TExMaT? What is the TExES test series? The Texas Examinations of Educator Standards (TExES) are designed to ensure that newly certified teachers have the necessary knowledge and skill levels of an entry-level teacher in the Texas public school system. They are based on the state's required curriculum for students, texas essential knowledge and skills (TEKS). TExES are computer-administered exams, referenced. That is, they measure scores in relation to the established criterion rather than the performance of others on the test. All tests contain self-selected (multiple choice) answer questions, while some may include write or oral answers. Exams of the theme area subject to TExES While the specific exams required differ by thematic area, pedagogy and professional responsibilities (PPR) are usually required along with one or more of the exams in the required content area. Each exam is divided into domains that are further divided into more specific skills within each domain. Detailed manuals for each field of the certification exam are available from www.tx.nesinc.com the Prepare section. Here you will find manuals that will familiarize you with the domains and skills to be tested, the question formats and the resources of Texas Examinations for Master Teachers (TExMaT) Exams in Texas for Teachers (TExMaT) determine a candidate's ability to mentor to other teachers and to fulfill regular teaching responsibilities. To take the TExMaT, a teaching certificate is required in Texas and a minimum teaching experience of at least three years. Successful performance will result in a master teacher certificate. There are four areas where you can get a master teacher certificate. reading, math, science and technology. Reading, math, and science assessments each span 5 hours and include selected answer questions and a case study with a built-in answer task. The reading examination covers early childhood up to grade 12, while mathematics and science exams are offered in three levels (early childhood up to grade 4, grade 4 to grade 8 and grade 8 to grade 12). The master technology teacher exam consists of a selected response section, a case study with a constructed response task, and two performance assessments.
